2. Attraction details

Sensoji Temple - Asakusa

Sensoji is Tokyo's oldest Buddhist temple and one of the city's best-known traditional attractions. Visitors commonly enter through Kaminarimon, walk along Nakamise shopping street, and continue toward the temple's main hall and five-story pagoda. It is a strong choice for travelers interested in traditional Tokyo, temples, street snacks, and historic atmosphere.

Planning tip: Best paired with: Nakamise Street, Sumida River, and TOKYO SKYTREE.

Meiji Jingu - Harajuku / Yoyogi

Meiji Jingu is a major Shinto shrine set inside a large forested area between Shibuya and Shinjuku. The approach through the trees gives a very different atmosphere from the nearby shopping streets of Harajuku and Omotesando. Entry to the main shrine grounds is free, while some optional garden areas may have separate admission.

Planning tip: Best paired with: Harajuku, Omotesando, and Yoyogi Park.

Shibuya Scramble Crossing - Shibuya

Shibuya Scramble Crossing is one of Tokyo's most recognizable urban landmarks. Large groups of pedestrians cross the intersection from multiple directions when the signal changes. The surrounding area is packed with shopping, dining, entertainment, and nightlife.

Planning tip: Best paired with: Shibuya Center-gai, Hachiko area, and nearby observation viewpoints.

TOKYO SKYTREE - Sumida

TOKYO SKYTREE is a 634-meter broadcasting tower with observation facilities offering wide views across Tokyo. It is part of TOKYO SKYTREE TOWN, which also contains shopping, dining, an aquarium, and other entertainment. Sunset and evening visits are popular, so advance ticket purchase can be useful during busy periods.

Planning tip: Best paired with: Asakusa and Sumida River.

Tokyo Tower - Minato

Tokyo Tower is a 333-meter landmark completed in 1958. It has observation decks and remains one of Tokyo's classic skyline symbols. The surrounding area also includes temples, parks, and newer developments around Azabudai and Toranomon.

Planning tip: Best paired with: Zojoji Temple, Azabudai Hills, and Roppongi.

teamLab Borderless - Azabudai Hills

teamLab Borderless is an immersive digital-art museum in Azabudai Hills. Its installations are designed to flow between spaces rather than follow a fixed museum route. Timed-entry tickets are commonly used, so travelers should check availability and reserve in advance when possible.

Planning tip: Best for: digital art, immersive experiences, photography, and indoor sightseeing.

Shinjuku Gyoen National Garden - Shinjuku

Shinjuku Gyoen combines Japanese traditional, formal, and landscape garden styles. It is popular for seasonal flowers, cherry blossoms, autumn foliage, and quieter walks away from busy central Tokyo. The garden has rules that restrict activities such as alcohol consumption and some recreational equipment.

Planning tip: Best for: nature, photography, picnics, and a slower morning or afternoon.

Tsukiji Outer Market - Tsukiji

Tsukiji Outer Market remains a major food destination even though the former wholesale market moved to Toyosu in 2018. The outer market has hundreds of shops selling seafood, sushi, kitchenware, seasonings, and other food-related products. It is most lively in the morning and around lunchtime, and many stores close earlier than typical shopping districts.

Planning tip: Best for: breakfast, sushi, seafood, food souvenirs, and kitchenware.

Ueno Park - Ueno

Ueno Park is a large cultural and recreational area beside Ueno Station. It contains museums, a zoo, shrines, Shinobazu Pond, and seasonal flower viewing. The surrounding Ueno and Ameyoko areas also offer casual food and shopping.

Planning tip: Best for: museums, families, parks, cherry blossoms, and flexible half-day plans.

Imperial Palace East Gardens - Central Tokyo

The East Gardens of the Imperial Palace occupy part of the former Edo Castle grounds and contain historic remains, landscaped gardens, and large green spaces. They provide a quiet historical stop close to Tokyo Station and Otemachi. The gardens are generally closed on Mondays and Fridays, subject to official scheduling.

Planning tip: Best paired with: Tokyo Station, Marunouchi, and the Imperial Palace outer grounds.

3. Simple itinerary combinations

Traditional East Tokyo: Sensoji Temple -> Asakusa streets -> Sumida River -> TOKYO SKYTREE.

Modern West Tokyo: Meiji Jingu -> Harajuku / Omotesando -> Shibuya Scramble Crossing.

Central Tokyo culture: Imperial Palace East Gardens -> Tokyo Station / Marunouchi -> Tsukiji Outer Market.

City views and digital art: Tokyo Tower -> Azabudai Hills -> teamLab Borderless.

Family / museum day: Ueno Park -> museums or zoo -> Ameyoko.

4. Practical planning notes

- Tokyo is large, so group attractions by neighborhood instead of crossing the city repeatedly.

- For ticketed attractions such as observation decks and digital-art museums, check the official website before travel because capacity, prices, and opening hours can change.
- Morning visits are especially useful for Tsukiji Outer Market and popular temples. Sunset and evening are popular for observation towers.
- Weather can affect outdoor sightseeing, so gardens and viewpoints may be better swapped with indoor attractions when necessary.
